Dear Don:

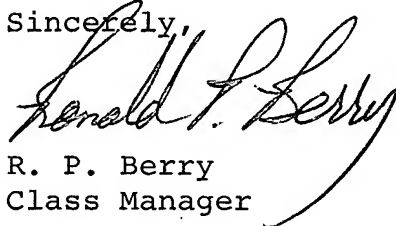

I'm sure that by now the pace of the real world has reasserted itself and you're busily engaged in your normal activities. The other instructors and I trust that the time you spent with us in Poughkeepsie was a worthwhile investment and provided some assistance to you.

Our overall objective for the Executive Information Systems Class was to provide both a basic understanding of the nature of computers and computing, as well as some insight into those key issues which we believe are related to successful use of Data Processing and Information Systems in your own organization.

Since we're always in the process of evaluating our program, your candid thoughts on our success in accomplishing our objective would be most helpful. The enclosed form is provided to facilitate your evaluation of the material.

Thanks again for joining us. Your interest and participation contributed greatly to the success of the class, and I found working with you both rewarding and enjoyable.

Sincerely,

R. P. Berry
Class Manager
